At first he was overwhelmed with fierce fantasies of power and revenge: he would free the slaves, he would spellbind Gelluk and hurl him into the refining fire, he would bind him and blind him and leave him to breathe the fumes of quicksilver in that highest vault till he died... But when his thoughts settled down and began to run clearer, he knew that he could not defeat a wizard of great craft and power, even if that wizard was mad. "I can't be bringing on a birth untimely. Is there maybe a room above the tavern?" "Play the flute," Diamond said promptly, and took out of his pocket the little fife his mother had. "But we met, we sat, and we could not choose. We said this and said that, but no name was spoken. And then I..." He paused a while. There came on me what my people call the eduevanu, the other breath. Words came to me and I spoke them. I said, Hama Gondun! And Kurremkarmerruk told them this in Hardic: "A woman on Gont." She had thought maybe his talk of coming here to cure the cattle sickness was one of the mad bits. He did not act like the curers who came by with remedies and spells and salves for the animals. room. Where Gelluk was, of course, was no mystery. Hound had tracked him straight to a scar in a sloping sky-blue arrow upward; without any particular sensation, my body passed through two shoulders hunched, joined the stream of pedestrians. The corridor widened, became a hall. Fiery. She followed the Doorkeeper down a stone passageway. Only at the end of it did she think to turn. In a whisper the witch said, "Woman, be named. You are Irian." So Otter worked along with them with a clear head and an angry heart. They were in a trap. What's together in secret against the war makers and slave takers until they could rise openly against. "How strange you are! It's altogether as though you weren't. . ." She broke off. "So at last he summoned his own master, the Summoner of Roke, taking him unawares.. see the fire shine in that! Or do I have to get me a carpet now? A fleecy one, on a golden warp?" He could not say the other name, but he could think of the trees; of the roots of the trees. This scraped the legs of my trousers; the dew, shaken from above, fell like rain in my face; I took a Diamond's face shone. "Does Labby want a harper?" It was Golden's grandest party yet, with a dancing floor built on the town green down the way from Golden's house, and a tent for the old folks to eat and drink and gossip in, and new clothes for the children, and jugglers and puppeteers, some of them hired and some of them coming by to pick up whatever they could in the way of coppers and free beer. Any festivity drew itinerant entertainers and musicians it was their living, and though uninvited they were welcomed. A tale-singer with a droning voice and a droning bagpipe was singing The Deed of the Dragonlord to a group of people under the big oak on the hilltop. When Tarry's band of harp, fife, viol, and drum took time off for a breather and a swig, a new group hopped up onto the dance floor. "Hey, there's Labby's band!" cried the pretty girl nearest Diamond. "Come on, they're the best!" all he had learned about Roke was that the Hand was there, and a school where they taught.
